Dodo

Dodos lived on the island of Mauritius. They were about one metre tall and they couldn't fly. They ate fruit and plants from the floor. They were first discovered in the 16th Century but were extinct by the 17th Century. They became extinct because man hunted them and also introduced predators to the island that weren't there before.

Woolly Mammoth

Woolly mammoths lived from over 400,000 years ago and the last ones survived until around 4,000 years ago. They lived in Asia, Russia and North America. They were very similar to modern elephants and they were around the same size. They had long tusks and their bodies were covered in fur. They became extinct because of hunting and because of big changes in the weather.
