

A review

On Thursday, November 15 we received the visit of two storytellers, it was not the first time they came to our school. One of them told the stories in English and the other translated them into Galician. They told several stories, all very entertaining and funny.

The first story was about a man that wanted to cross a river and the only way to cross it was in a boat. Suddenly, there were many waves and the boat overturned.

The second story was about a man that had to look for the answer to a question because, otherwise, his head would be cut off.. When he found that answer, he had to marry a witch, but when he kissed her, the spell of the witch was broken and she turned into a very beautiful girl, but only for the night or only for the day.

The third story was about a woman that was getting married. She made a promise to the man that she was in love with. The woman fulfilled her promise and they got rid of the spell.

The fourth story was about a man that made a promise to his friends which consisted that he could not talk in a day but he couldn't fulfill his promise, he broke it at the moment when a beautiful girl asked for his name.

I liked this activity a lot because it was very funny, and very entertaining, I liked the contrast between English and Galician. It is a very good activity ; I recommend it to you all.

My favourite story is the fourth, which is really cool. The story was about a man that made a promise to his friend, he wasn't allowed to speak during a whole day. This story was a sequence of sounds that the man had to make because he could not speak. He met a girl who seemed very pretty but she had a boyfriend. The angry boyfriend began to chase the silent man along the town. The man hid and ran until he bumped into a person ...who was the boy's -who was chasing him - girlfriend, she asked for his name and he couldn't avoid answering and, consequently, he broke his promise.

I found this story very funny and I was happy to listen to it once again.

By Ana Sofía Prieto Amador, 4º ESO A