

THE FROGS IN THE CREAM

Once upon a time, two little frogs fell into a cream bowl. They knew they were sinking; it was impossible to swim or float. At the beginning, both of them kicked their legs in the cream, but it was useless. Breathing was more and more difficult, and one of them said:

- I give in. I can't swim any more. It's impossible and, as I'm going to die, I will end up with this suffering.

Then, she stopped kicking and sank. The other little frog, more perseverant, said:

- Nothing can be done to move forward, but, although death is coming, I'll fight to the end.

And she kept on kicking in the same place for hours. Suddenly, the cream turned into butter and the frog jumped out of the bowl and returned home croacking happily.