

How do you see your professional future?

Here in Spain the economic situation is difficult due to the crisis we are undergoing. There are no job opportunities and many students go abroad to work. This is difficult but, in many cases, necessary.

Businesses close because they do not have money, and many people remain unemployed. I think that no sector is immune to this crisis.

To look for a job, you must have experience, but if you have just finished your studies, you cannot have it. And, vice versa, older people have a lot of experience, but no academic qualifications.

Also, the problem of corruption makes it difficult to change the system and people have not got the will to do it. They just prefer going abroad looking for a job to staying here and protest.

But there are indeed people who protest, everyday, for a chance for us, the young, the future. This is admirable.

Personally, I would like to do something, I don not know what exactly, but the current situation must improve. If there are a thousand problems, we must work out a thousand and one solutions. And I am not just talking about Spain, I am talking about the world. Luther King knew, the American separatists knew, and the citizens of the French Revolution. And we know it right now. We, the youth, can work this out.

I want to study medicine, and another person may study economics, or politics, but everybody must contribute to improve the current situation.

I am willing to help, and you?

Marta Vázquez Meizoso,
1st year Baccalauréat
IES Fene, Spain

