Being actor is one of the most common dreams of people nowadays. It is funny, it is exciting and it is well-paid, but it is also really tough getting to become a good actor. That is why we admire them so much.

This admiration probably was the reason that motivated the rock and roll singer Elvis Presley to participate in several movies. Elvis was born on Mississippi and his parents were very poor. These weren't the best ingredients to elaborate a successful career, but despite all, he was able to release his first song That's all right. From this moment, he was "The king of Rock and Roll".

Another American actor that took advantage from his skills to making a career in the cinema industry was Bruce Lee. Born in 1940, Lee was short and thin but he was very strong and fast. His parents were from Hong Kong, so he was always interested in the martial arts. "Enter the dragon" was his last film.

Finally, we are going to talk about Grace Kelly. She was born in Philadelphia, in 1929. Belonging to a very rich family, Grace Kelly firstly was a model, then an actor and after getting married with Prince Rainier III, she was nothing less than a princess. Her first film was Fourteen hours in 1951.

A singer, a fighter and a princess were attracted by the magic of cinema. How are we not going to feel attracted too?

Answer the following questions:

1.- Who of the three actors were poor when they were kids?

2.- Who was influenced by the culture of his/her family?

3.- Who do you think was the richest of the three? Why?

4.- What opinion do you think that the author of the text has about being an actor?

a) He thinks that it is not worth it.

b) He thinks that it is tough, but it is worth it.

5.- Which actor do you think can beat the other two? Why?
