TOPIC: YOUTH ISSUES

You read this information in an online newspaper:

Spanish kids leave home much later than EU average

The figures reveal that in Spain the average youngster doesn't leave home until the age of 28.9 years. "There are two factors that come into play here," explains Héctor Sanz, the head of the Youth Board "the high price of property and a lack of steady work prospects." Calculations from the observatory suggest that to buy a house right now, young people would have to commit 60% of their salary – double the level recommended by experts. Given that 38.7% of youngsters in Spain are currently unemployed, the chances of being able to leave the family home are remote.
